BEVERLY HILLS (March 21, 2013) – Krupin Partners, LLC, a risk management services firm helping clients protect assets and preserve wealth, is pleased to announce three key professionals have joined the firm. Brian Batson fills the newly-created position of chief operating officer, while nationally-renowned Milt L. Belfer, CLU expands the firm’s expertise in the disability insurance arena. William T. Browning, who previously was a highly-successful member of Krupin Partners’ predecessor firm, has rejoined his former colleagues.

“We are very excited to have attracted such talented professionals as Brian, Milt and Will to our business platform,” said managing partner Bryan Krupin. “We formed Krupin Partners last year to build a unique risk management business based on the highest standards of knowledge, professionalism and service. Bringing Brian on in the role of COO escalates our success from coast-to-coast. His background in corporate operations and sales at large public companies, coupled with his extensive life insurance and wealth management experience servicing affluent markets, is ideal for our needs.”

Batson previously was Western Regional Director of Client Operations for The Delp Company, a 50-year old, East Coast-based wealth management firm. At Delp, he was integral to developing and implementing the firm’s first Multi-Family Office offering and launched Registered Investment Advisory affiliates. He began his career in business management, sales and operational finance positions at Fortune 500 high technology companies, and later was a founder and partner in a boutique brokerage general agency. Batson earned his B.A. in Economics from Stanford University, and his MBA from Saint Mary’s College in Moraga, California.

“It is my great pleasure to be guiding this successful team,” noted Batson. “Bryan and his father, Mike Krupin, are well-respected visionaries in the industry, creating unlimited opportunities for their clients and colleagues. Likewise, Milt is a legend in the disability arena and Will is trusted by clients across the country for his life and disability product knowledge and high service standards.”
